BANKER LITTLE'S TRIAL.

Testimony of Mrs. Samuel Woods, of OLATON, Kan., March 21.—In the trial of Banker Little for the killing of Lawyer Johnson, yesterday afternoon, Lawrence Woodson, a witness, testified that he had known the bad character of Johnson, the murdered man, and claimed that he had laid the plot which resulted in the murder of her husband at Hagenot, three years ago. In talking of the killing of Johnson she stated that he had met his just deserts.

The deposition of W. R. Bennett of Kansas City, Mo., was read, permitting a witness to give all testimony so far produced. He stated that he and Johnson were going home together for supper on the evening of the shooting, when they met Little. North cut spoke to and shook hands with Little and said, "Hello, old cat. I like you." "Don't you speak to me."

After passing Little Johnson said, "I will see you later." The deposition of Bennett was not read and was shown to the jury.

The evidence is so strong for the defense that the State subpoenaed fifty more witnesses this forenoon.

Working the Market in Wall Street to Favorably Influence Legislation at Washington—Some Inside History of Recent Speculation in Sugar Certificates—Profits Derived Through the Whisky Tax.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21.—The tariff bill reported yesterday disclosed officially the concessions made to the sugar and whisky trusts. The sugar trust practically received all the gratuity that it could force with the whisky trust and its powerful influence opposed to any concession in its favor. The reporting of the measure has ended the controversy in the committee, but it is altogether probable that the fight will be reopened in the debate in the open senate. Now that the concessions have been made, the two monopolies have been exposed. It is not imagined that either will attempt to influence the senate in favor of further protection. The game now is to hold all that each has obtained from the committee. From all appearances the lobbies at work here are being backed with much skill and discretion by the manipulators of the stocks of the two monopolies in the Exchange in New York. It is well understood that when the bill, if the favorable schedules are not disturbed in the senate, is sent to conference that the representatives of the House in conference on the measure will oppose strenuously the changes in the schedules affecting the trusts.

The plans of the New York speculators, however, have not deceived any one here who is at all familiar with stock manipulation. When the Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee changed the sugar schedule in such a way as to give the trust a protection of 10 cents per pound, it was well recognized by certain members of the Finance Committee, as well as by the public generally, that the stock of the American Refining Co., the corporate name of the trust, would be increased in value. It will be recalled that the sugar stock advanced, with only slight reactions, designed to squeeze the "shorts" from about $4 to within one point of par.

WHEN PROFITS WERE MADE.
It was in this market advance that certain Senators are said to have made their big profit. The trust saw at once that such an advance would have a most decidedly unfavorable effect here, and every effort was made to check this boom in sugar certificates. The trust, it is well known, controls nearly all of the stock, but it is evident that its representatives in the first flurry were unable to control the quotations of the small portion of the stock on the market. After the first boom, which was not sustained, however, the trust tightened its grasp on the operations on the Exchange, and sugar has since fluctuated about 90 and 91.

How skillfully the trust has manipulated the market to back up the lobby here is plainly disclosed in the quotations during the past two days. The Post-Dispatch on Monday exclusively outlined the further concessions in favor of the trust and it was to have been supposed that the market would respond, with as marked an advance as had occurred when a similar protection was granted by the Democratic sub-committee. Evidently, the Senators were not in a pool on this second advance, or perhaps their profits were secured in another way, for the market instead of advancing, has materially declined. The trust would seem, intends that no further advance shall be made until after the bill emerges from the Conference Committee. The sugar lobby is aware of the adverse sentiment that has been excited in the House by the action of the Senate Committee, by removing sugar from the free list, and they intend furthermore that any great advance in sugar stock will be readily accepted as conclusive proof of the great value to the trust of the protective concessions that have been made in the Senate. Not only the lobby but the Senators who have in any way influenced the action of the committee, which afforded a protection in the whisky and sugar schedules will be stubbornly fought by the House.

The majority in favor of free sugar in the House was so large that it is expected that the Democratic side will not yield a fraction in favor of the reduction. The suspicion is general that the second concession made by the Senate Finance Committee is intended to be used as a basis of compromise between the two houses. If the bill, as reported by the Democratic members of the committee, is passed, a protection of about 10 cents per pound, had not been further modified, the trust would have had only a small chance if any compromise were demanded by the House conferees.

The trust, it is believed, would be content with this protection, and in order to insure this it was deemed advisable to add the second concession, which can be dropped out if the House conferees insist that the refiners have guaranteed too much. This scheme is well understood by the friends of free sugar in the House, and they are already at work on plans to restore sugar to the free list, as it was in the Wilson bill.

THE SUGAR LOBBY.
The sugar lobby, while it has shown itself influential enough to control the Senate Finance Committee, does not intend to attempt to abandon the field until the bill gets to conference. It is not so certain, however, that the sugar schedule as reported will pass the Senate in the present shape, and the sugar lobby proposes to remain here, to protect the concessions the trust has already obtained. Mr. Havemeyer has temporarily left the city, but the trust has a skillful representative in Washington, in the person of Mr. Searies, who has a suit of apartments at the Shoreham. While Mr. Havemeyer was at the Arlington all the senatorial speculators flocked in and out of his parlors, and had repeated conferences with him.

Mr. Havemeyer, however, paid little attention to details, which were intrusted to Mr. Searies. What these "details" have been may be imagined from the result of the Finance Committee's action. Mr. Searies' parlors are on the sixth floor of the Shoreham and are divided into three rooms advantageously situated to receive callers who might not wish to be seen by outside people. The only thing open about the apartments is the open-faced silver watch carried by the secretary of Mr. Searies. Mr. Searies has held forth in the parlors at the left of the private entrance. If any of his callers desired to leave unnoticed it was easy to pass into the adjoining room and then out through the hallway.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent attempted to see Mr. Searies to-day, and his experience illustrates the secrecy with which the representative of the trust conducts his operations. Mr. Searies was engaged with a caller when the Post-Dispatch man's card was sent to him. An answer came, but the card promptly that "Mr. Searies would be down." Fifteen minutes elapsed and Mr. Searies' caller had evidently retired, for word came down to "come up." The youthful secretary met the Post-Dispatch man at the door of Mr. Searies' apartments, and after saying him anxiously for a moment, asked "if the Post-Dispatch man desired to see Mr. Searies personally." He was answered in the affirmative. The secretary paused and in a hesitating way, which was explained by the suspicious movement from one room to another of a man whose card had not been seen, said that "Mr. Searies was not in," but that "he could be seen later."

THE WHISKY TRUST.
The increase in the whisky tax will bring a profit of many millions to the trust. There is no longer any doubt that the trust will be able to raise a sufficient amount of capital to withdraw its surplus stock from bond. It is said here that a syndicate headed by Nelson Starn of Chicago is preparing to finance the trust to withdraw the trust's surplus product on the 90 cents per gallon basis and thereby realize the additional 20 cents a gallon. Mr. Starn has been in Washington for some weeks and is still here. It is understood that the whisky lobby has been able to stand that the whisky lobby of the Finance Committee, which is said to account for this second concession of 10 cents a gallon on whisky. The exposure of the operations of the Whisky Trust lobby will probably lead to as much opposition in the House as the increase in the sugar schedule. The House is greatly agitated over these concessions to the trust and many sensational developments are expected, if the bill as reported passes the Senate.

WAS SHE MURDERED?

Investigating the Mysterious Killing of Type-Writer Miss Fuller.

New York, March 21.—The body of Miss Martha J. Fuller, the typewriter, who was found dead in Lawyer Joseph T. Magee's office last Saturday evening, with a pistol bullet in her head, will be buried this afternoon. The result of the autopsy has not yet been made public. It has been disclosed that the bullet entered Miss Fuller's head on the right side instead of the left, just to the right of the temporal fossa, had passed through the head and emerged, coming out of the left side at a point one-half inch higher than the point of entrance. There were no powder marks whatever, and the flesh on neither side of the head was burned.

The wound on the right side at the point of entrance being oval, it is indicated, as the doctor said, that there must have been some little space between the head and the pistol for the bullet to turn and make such a wound as this. Experts agree that if the pistol had been held a little way from the head, any distance up to eighteen inches, there would have been powder marks and burning of the flesh. As to Miss Fuller having held the pistol eighteen inches away from her head and shot herself, it was impossible. These disclosures seem to set aside the theory of suicide. Miss Fuller was shot at 5:30 p. m. Saturday. A crowd of people gathered in the vicinity of Nassau Chambers rushed in to see her lying in the agony of death on the floor of the office. She was lying on her back, with her head on the floor, and her hands were clasped in prayer. She was wearing a dark dress and a white collar. Witnesses Describe Pat Condon's Assault on Valentine Schrempf.

JOHN THOMAS BRADY EXHIBITED OF COMPLICITY IN THE MURDER.

Several Eye Witnesses Say That Condon Stood Over Schrempf's Prostrate Form and Dealt Him Violent Blows With His Club—Threatened a Man Who Attempted to Interfere With His Murderous Work.

The inquest on the body of John Schrempf, foreman at Kari's livery stable, Eleventh and Pine streets, who died yesterday at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital from the effects of being assaulted with a club by Pat Condon, a horseholder, whose shop is on Eleventh street near Pine street, on Saturday night last was begun at 11 a. m. to-day. Jacob Schrempf of Appleton City, Mo., a brother of the deceased was the first witness. He testified that his brother was 25 years old, single and was born in Illinois. Dr. James J. Draca, the physician who attended Schrempf, testified as to the nature of Schrempf's injuries and his death. Officer John McMillen, who arrested Condon, testified that Condon said to him that he had given a man who had assaulted him previously a good beating.

THE FIRST WITNESS. Valentine Martin of 1019 Pine street, was the first witness who had seen the assault to testify. He was standing on the southwest corner of Eleventh and Pine streets and saw a man whom he identified as Condon strike Schrempf.

With a club at the southeast corner of the intersection of Eleventh and Pine streets outside of the door of a saloon, Condon struck Schrempf on the head and side with a club which he held in both hands. Schrempf staggered against the door of the saloon and Condon struck him again. Schrempf fell to the sidewalk and rolled over on his back, and Condon struck Schrempf three more blows on the side of his head. Witness ran across the street and threatened a man told Condon not to strike Schrempf any more. Witness said the citizen who interfered was present and would testify.

Witness did not see any one interfere and draw back and strike him twice with a club, knocking him down. He struck him three times while he was down. Witness did not hear anything said before the blows were struck. Witness also testified to the man attempting to interfere in Schrempf's behalf. Was asked if he saw John Thomas Brady, who was present, and who was having been present and attempting to keep people from interfering. Brady was pointed out by witness and he said that he did not see him there, and also stated that no one excepting the citizen referred to attempted to interfere. Condon exhibited a revolver after the assault and walked off.

C. F. Waddell of 4015 Page avenue was passing and saw one man strike another three times with a club, using both hands and striking a left handed blow. A small sized man attempted to interfere when the man who had struck the other reached back toward his hip pocket, and the other man was lying on the sidewalk where the man was lying and struck him again. After the assault, a man who was assaulted was assisted to Kari's livery stable, and he was revived and walked to the Dispensary, where his injuries were dressed. Witness did not recognize the man who committed the assault.

HAD MURDER IN HIS HEART. William Fidler of 1819 Pine street, a line-man, was standing within six or eight feet of Schrempf when the latter was struck. He was talking to a friend when he saw the man swinging around the corner of the brick wall and strike Schrempf, who was standing in the door and the man who wielded the club struck him several times while he was down. Schrempf's back was toward the man who struck the blow when the blow was given. He recognized Condon as the man who struck the blows. A man named Smith tried to interfere and Condon drew a revolver half-way out of his pocket and the man drew back and fled. Witness was not on the corner when the difficulty began but Condon, Schrempf, the man to whom he was talking, Smith, the man who attempted to interfere, and a young lady.

SMITH TESTIFIES. James A. Smith was the man who attempted to interfere. He lives in Batchelor block. He saw the man who struck the blow. When his attention was attracted by the difficulty he ran up to the men and told the man who was striking the other not to kill the man. The man with the club drew the club back and witness testified.

Witness recognized Condon as the man who struck the other. Condon struck the other one a blow after he attempted to interfere. Witness did not see Brady there. Brady was made to stand up, but witness did not recognize him.

Other witnesses gave testimony to the same effect. Herman Osterhaus, an employee at Kari's stable, said that on last Monday, Schrempf was related on horse, Condon came to the stable and said: "I did a good job on him and I'll do a better one on you."

After being out about ten minutes the jury returned a verdict holding Condon and exonerating Brady, who was taken down stairs to Capt. Boyd's office and released.

CRECELIOUS' SUIT. Testimony in His Action Against Bierman for Slander—Court News.

The slander suit of Charles C. Crecelius, ex-cashier of the Fifth National Bank, against Paul H. Bierman was on trial this morning in Judge Valliant's court. The suit grows out of a former suit in which Bierman was being sued for a note which Anna C. Crecelius held and claimed was still due her. During the trial of the case Mr. Bierman declared the endorsement on one of the notes to be a rank forgery of a very clumsy quality. Mr. Crecelius brought suit for slander in consequence. The case was argued on law points all day yesterday and the first witnesses put on the stand to-day.

The first witness called was Clerk G. W. Priest, Clerk of the Court, No. 5, in which the original case was tried. Mr. Priest identified the petition in the former case and the memoranda upon it as those made by him when the judgment was rendered.

The stenographer of the court, F. E. Nevin, testified that he had taken for his notes taken at the time of the trial in November, 1903. When Clerk Priest was called upon to testify he was sworn by the judge, and when the stenographer was sworn by Clerk Priest he kept his place at his little table and took down the case in his own testimony.

Mr. Krum for the defendant objected to everything. But finally the case got fairly started, and the testimony of Mr. Nevin was admitted as to the transcript of that portion of the evidence upon which the suit is based. District Attorney Crompton read the petition in the suit of Anna Crecelius, which was tried last November before Judge Valliant. Some minute law points were raised by both sides, and a good deal of argument was done by the attorneys. On the question of admitting the stenographer's notes as evidence there was a great struggle, which was finally concluded by the court ruling that the stenographer might refresh his memory from his notes, but that the notes themselves could not go in as evidence.

The reporter of the Post-Dispatch, who reported the case at the time the alleged slander was uttered was next called and there was some argument over the admission of his testimony unless it could be shown that Bierman was responsible for the publication and had indicated it. Mr. Krum argued that Mr. Bierman was in no way responsible, and Mr. Crompton said he was as much as he had made the statement knowing it would be published.

Some testimony as to the publication was admitted and other witnesses brought to show to what extent Mr. Crecelius had been injured. The case was carried over until after recess when the hearing of testimony was resumed.

Judge Withrow's Decisions. Judge Withrow handed down a number of decisions to-day.

The decisions were, City of St. Louis against Chouteau and others. Exceptions to report of commissioner affirmed.

Frank Bender against the city. Motion to make plaintiff make his petition more definite sustained.

Beat Clubmen against H. Abraham; motion to tax costs against plaintiff overruled.

Wyckoff, Seaman & Hendricks against J. T. Bolan; motion to set aside order disallowing appeal overruled.

Dora Schmiding against D. Crawford; motion to make second amended petition more definite overruled.

R. C. Smith vs. J. Donovan; motion to set aside dismissal sustained.

J. W. Collins vs. J. Waddingham; motion to set aside dismissal sustained.

Bremen Bank vs. A. Dietz et al.; motion of Dietz for new trial and arrest of judgment overruled.

C. C. Crane vs. M. J. Koons; motion for new trial overruled.

Von der Ahe's Fireworks Venture. Another relic of the Pinkerton fireworks show at Sportsman's Park last summer came upon the call of the docket in Judge Valliant's court to-day in the case of E. W. Noon against Pinkerton & Von der Ahe. Noon bore out some cannons which were used in the show and sent in his bill for the amount. The subject was announced as "The Chemical Fuel and Water." The professor went into an exhaustive description of the various kinds of fuel and the causes thereof. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon.

PROF. TRICHMAN'S LECTURE.—Prof. W. C. Trichman, the City Chemist, gave a very interesting lecture on polluted water before the alumni of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy. The subject was announced as "The Chemical Fuel and Water." The professor went into an exhaustive description of the various kinds of fuel and the causes thereof. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon.

INJURED COW.

The Humane Society called in to attend to them.

The three cows belonging to Mr. Charles Emmenegger, which were crippled yesterday afternoon on Virginia avenue and Itasca street, where motor car No. 96 of the Union Depot line ran into a drove of them, were left badly injured and still suffering on the roadside by Mr. Emmenegger. No arrangements were made by the owner to end the agonies of the unfortunate beasts, but he has been trying to effect a settlement with the railroad company and refused to do anything for the suffering cattle. The Humane Society sent assistance in the shape of food and veterinary assistance to the scene of the accident and about noon to-day were caring for the injured cows.

Charged With Stealing Books. ANNE HILL, or Hesel, who worked until recently for Dr. L. C. Lemone of 2130 Locust street, was arrested this morning by Deputy Sheriff Lee on a warrant charging her with petit larceny in stealing a number of books from her former employer. It is said that the prisoner is known in San Antonio, Tex., as a shop-lifter. This information was received, it is said, by Dr. Lemone in a letter from a friend in San Antonio, and Annie claims to have gotten hold of the letter and turned it over to the Federal authorities.
